

During her photographic shoot, the former Miss Earth South Africa explained spoke about what it means to be a climate activist, the power she believes education has to uplift society, and the vital role women must play in preserving our environment.

Gary explains his thinking behind the portrait. "Inspired by her passion for the environment and the work she does to highlight women's contributions in the conservation space, the portrait is set on Llandudno Beach in Cape Town. A wreath of indigenous flowers encircling her head, Catherine is photographed surrounded by the very ecosystem she fights to protect."
