

Capturing our nation's best

21
ICONS

This weekend, City Press and 21 Icons begin a partnership in celebration of South Africans who have reached the pinnacle of achievement in their fields of endeavour.

City Press editor in chief Ferial Haffajee says: "In a country obsessed with building itself, and where we pick at our national sores and all appoint ourselves co-governors, both our 21 Icons and World Class projects are an effort to showcase fine South Africans doing interesting and path-breaking work. They are our breather. The opportunity to sit back, look, aspire and declare: 'What a fine country and what fine South Africans.'"

The 21 Icons is in its second year and it is a series of short films that document the conversations between photographer Adrian Steirn and his subject.

It is also a series of 21 collectable posters, which you will find tucked into #Trending from next Sunday, August 10.

The first two posters will be of Albie Sachs, featured this week, and Dr Imtiaz Sooliman, also one of City Press' 100 World Class South Africans. The first two posters will also double as a folder in which to collect all your posters until December 21, when the last in the series will be featured.

The films go out on SABC3 every Sunday night from tonight at 8.27pm.

City Press' 100 World Class South Africans launches in September during Heritage Month.
